In response to the question discussed on pages 40 and 41 regarding the Tahiti area, the following answer is provided:

"The only official consulates existing in Tahiti were those of Nationalist China and the U.S. The Nationalist Chinese Consul General left in the spring of 1965 as a result of French recognition of Communist China, while the U.S. Consulate was closed about the same time at French request. There are a number of countries, including Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Norway, and Sweden, which have 'honorary consuls' in Tahiti. These are natives of Tahiti and have no official status; no adverse actions have been taken against them by the French."
